Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Maurice Hewlett knows how to write of men and things as they are. He gives flashing pictures from human life and its settings, or better still he has the grace that lets such pictures speak for themselves. There were men of old times whose lives as they moved and spoke were much like the abrupt setting in which they lived. Hewlett has searched their records, the tales of Iceland and the forbidding country about it. He reads, as no one who comes close to their literature can fail to do, the direct honesty, clear-cut action, and the play of heart gripping love or the impairing subtlety of treachery which passed over their lives. Though the starkness of their Sagas shocks this writer of modern times he is skillful in his sympathy in portraying the high relief and the softer shadows of these people. They are far away in time as they are remote through their difference in climate and the forbidding circumstances which this brings with it. No time or space separates them from us in elements of character, in the varying interplay of the elements which distinguishes each individual so clearly in these northern tales. There is here in The Light Heart a man who is a friend of man, devoted to an ideal attachment even unto death. Thormod carries a light heart toward the necessities of everyday toil or everyday responsibilities. He had the poet's way of thinking rather than of doing, that knack of working out the ways of a deed so fully in the mind that when the time comes to do it, it seems already done, and done with: wherefore you simply...
